Camera Tricks

Shot = Unlike a true wide-angle lens (like a 24mm or 35mm), a 75mm will "pull" the background closer to the subject.

1. Distant mountains or buildings will look massive and imposing behind your subject, rather than small and far away.

Foreground "Dirtying"

2. On your 75mm shots (9.3.1), this creates a beautiful, blurry green frame that makes the shot feel deeper and more "hidden."
3. Use White Bounce to soften shadows.

Keep the Sun Behind the Subject

The "Negative Fill" Trick

The Trick: If you have a black side to your bounce board (or even a black jacket/tarp), hold it on the "shadow side" of his face (the side away from the sun).

The Result: This adds "shape" to his face by deepening the shadows on one side, making the shot look like it was lit with professional studio flags.

- The "Double Glow": Use one RGB light (Amber) for the creature and a second one (Deep Blue or Teal) as a subtle "kick" on the side of Dallas's neck during the Chase (Scene 10). This "Orange/Teal" contrast is a classic cinema color grade that makes the image look "finished" straight out of the camera.

The RGB "Color Combinations" to Master in 30 Mins:

This is the fastest way to learn how to combine these different colors to get a "look" like that reference:

1. The Classic "Orange & Teal" (Alien Discovery) This is the safest bet for Shot 9.3.2 (Dallas Gaze at Tree).

- The Main Light (The Sun): Set your main RGB light to a warm Amber/Orange. This is your 4:30 PM sunset.
- The Background (The Marshes): Set your RGB eyes and a second main light to a cool Cyan or Teal.
- The Combined Look: Position the warm light on the creature from one side, and the cool lights on the background or from the other side. This creates immediate, high-end separation. It tells the audience: "Dallas is safe (warm), but the creature is 'other' (cool)."

2. The "Predator/Prey" (Fear) For Shot 9.5.1 (ECU - Creature Shivers) or Scene 10.

- The Main Light (Survival): Keep your main light Amber/Sunset Orange.
- The Creature's Eyes: Set the RGB eyes to a deep Blue or Purple.
- The Combined Look: Use only the amber light for general illumination. The blue/purple eyes will pierce through, looking otherworldly and cold. As the tension rises, pulse the blue eyes to a Red.

3. The "Cotton Candy" (Surrealism) This is for Shot 9.1.1.2 (Wide Behind - 35mm) with the sunset.

- The Main Light (Sunset): Main light to Pink/Magenta.
- The RGB Eyes/Marsh: Set the eyes to Mint Green or Light Cyan.
- The Combined Look: These colors are further apart on the wheel, creating a very surreal, dream-like environment that fits those "jagged prisms of sunset" in your script. It emphasizes how weird and beautiful the marsh has become.
